

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A device for visually verifying the validity of a document which has a holder with a measuring window through which a document can be viewed by an observer. A light beam is fed into the device and directs substantially parallel light beams at a certain angle onto the measuring window. The light beams are captured and outputted enabling the document validity to be verified.